PASTOR'S PAGE

Everyone who knows me knows I am not a dentist. But I have great appreciation and respect for dentists. Actually, I know my very life depends on good dentistry. I cannot live or even be happy without dental care.

With the privilege of participating in the 2008 Loma Linda School of Dentistry Alumni celebration, I have given more thought to dentists and what they do. Frankly, I admit I have taken too much for granted the generous and gentle care my dentist provides me.

You deserve to know something of the soul-changing ministry of our dentists. Yes, we need them when something hurts and it's difficult to chew. But reflections on dentistry have helped me re-focus on how we are fearfully and wonderfully made. Indeed, our mouths are among the most significant organs of our bodies.

Without our mouths, how do we eat? Without our mouths, how do we drink? Without our mouths, how do we speak? Without our mouths, how do we smile? Without our mouths, how do we laugh? Without our mouths, well, there went the kisses.

Most of us started out better than we are. Along the way we may have gotten a little "down in our mouths." Others see us. Dentists see us. We even see ourselves. It is hard to smile. It is not a laughing matter. We need help.

The work of dentists is fixing what may be broken and healing what hurts. But dentists are really in the restoration business — helping us chew, helping us smile, helping us feel better all over, body, mind, and soul.

Jesus' main work was to restore in us the likeness of our Creator. So dentists are a part of our Lord's mission. When dentists help restore our mouths, they are also helping us know how much we are loved.

Associate for Pastoral Care

*Let the little children come to me, and do not hinder them, for the kingdom of God belongs to such as these.
Mark 10:14, NIV*

Noel, a stay-at-home dad, and Sharon, an LVN at Grand Terrace Rehabilitation Center, along with their two older children, Alan and Ella, bring Cody Rafael T. Basit to be dedicated today. This is even more special as today is Cody's dad's birthday.
